

Bahrain Airshow: MAZ Aviation and Comlux join forces to support VIP market growth

Posted on 21 January 2010 in Business Aviation

Luxury jet operators and managers, Switzerland's Comlux and Saudi Arabia's MAZ Aviation have come together to create a new Bahrain business to cater for the growing VIP demands.

PICTURED: Mohammed Al Zeer of MAZ and Comlux's Richard Gaona at today's announcement

Comlux and MAZ announced the creation of Comlux Middle East Company at the Bahrain show today.

Initially, Comlux and MAZ will base two of their Airbus aircraft in the region: one A318 Elite and one ACJ. At the end of 2010, Comlux will receive its brand new A320 Prestige that will be positioned in the Middle East region too. Thanks to this new aircraft base, Comlux Middle East will be more reactive on the charter demand of its clients.

Richard Gaona, President of Comlux Group said "A presence in the Middle East is strategic to our VIP aircraft operations in Fly Comlux division: we are really pleased to open our new office in Bahrain. This joint initiative between MAZ and Comlux follows our agreement for Saudi charter sales and represents a new step for our development into the Middle East. Our existing clients in the region are already very excited with the set up of Comlux Middle East and we are convinced that the quality of our services will attract new customers on board."

Mohammed Al Zeer, Chairman of MAZ Aviation said "Our aim is to provide close support and services to our clients in the Middle East. Bahrain is an excellent location to service the Business Aviation market in the whole Middle East. Bahrain has been chosen for its business environment, the quality of its infrastructures and the presence of the Business aviation infrastructure. "