

Comlux and MAZ Aviation establish Comlux Middle East in Bahrain

Comlux The Aviation Group and MAZ Aviation (MAZAV) have joined forces to create Comlux Middle East, based in Bahrain. Initially, Comlux and MAZAV will base two of their Airbus aircraft in the region – an A318 Elite and an ACJ. Comlux is due to receive a brand new A320 Prestige at the end of 2010, which will also be positioned in the Middle East region.

Comlux offers VIP charter services; aircraft management, sales and acquisitions; cabin design and outfitting; and maintenance services. “A presence in the Middle East is strategic to our VIP aircraft operations in Fly Comlux division: we are really pleased to open our new office in Bahrain,” said Richard Gaona, president of Comlux Group. “This joint initiative between MAZAV and Comlux follows our agreement for Saudi charter sales and represents a new step for our development into the Middle East. Our existing clients in the region are already very excited with the setup of Comlux Middle East and we are convinced that the quality of our services will attract new customers on board.”

MAZAV provides a range of aviation consulting and project management services to private companies, high net worth individuals and government organisations in the Middle East. “Our aim is to provide close support and services to our clients in the Middle East,” said Mohammed Al Zeer, chairman of MAZAV. “Bahrain is an excellent location to service the business aviation market in the whole Middle East. Bahrain has been chosen for its business environment, the quality of its infrastructures and the presence of the business aviation infrastructure.”
